

“Crossing Over” – Susan Grant (Murphy)

The painting depicts the red as a symbol of the inner rage, the demons within due to a build up of sorrow and pain from having lost things in my past, my father, my brother, my pictures on my computer of family and friends, who I'll never see again.

The travelling tracks and aboriginal symbols are the coming to terms with my losses, healing the pain, talking to others about the problems and the going forward from the past moving on to better things.

Starting a new journey, a journey of healing from within, coming to terms with my losses, dealing with the pain and the sorrow. Moving forward with the good memories.

The travelling of a new journey that is “Crossing Over” to new and better times.
